“Climate change, renewable energy and survival”

Honorable David Carty
Former Speaker of the Anguilla House of Assembly;
Chairman, Anguilla Energy Committee:

Climate change poses a direct threat to the viability of the small Caribbean island nation of Anguilla, which relies on tourism and financial services to sustain its economy. Both industries depend on reliable supplies of energy. In addition, tourism is especially dependent on a healthy marine environment. Public policy now seeks to tackle this threat while simultaneously developing a more sustainable energy supply using renewable sources.
